Bush: 'Positive Step' in Iran

Incentives include U.S. nuclear technology, diplomats say

WASHINGTON | President Bush said Tuesday that Iran's initial response to a package of incentives and threats on the nuclear impasse "sounds like a positive step to me."

"We will see if the Iranians take our offer seriously," he said. "The choice is theirs to make."

The package of incentives presented to Iran includes a major concession by Washington — an offer to join key European nations in providing some nuclear technology to Tehran if it stops enriching uranium, diplomats said.

The offer was part of a series of potential rewards presented to Tehran by EU foreign policy chief Javier Solana, according to the diplomats, who were familiar with the proposals and spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because they were disclosing confidential details.

The incentives agreed on last week by the United States, Britain, France, China and Russia — the five veto-wielding members of the U.N. Security Council — plus Germany, also include European offers of help in building nuclear reactors for a peaceful energy program, the diplomats said.

That European offer of light water reactors was revealed last month, but there had been no suggestion the Americans would join in and also agree to help build Iran's civilian nuclear program if Tehran freezes enrichment and agrees to negotiations. GEORGE JAHN (AP)

DISCOUNTS Down in the Pumps A time warp? Motorists lined up for a brief fueling frenzy recently at a pump in Doylestown, Pa. The pump was selling premium gasoline for 32.9 cents a gallon; the pump should have been set at $3.29.

After drivers called friends and relatives, cars lined up for a turn at the Lukoil pump. The rush was short-lived, however. Police said a woman called 911 after she noticed the error, though she pumped "plus" grade at the correct price. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

APPEARANCES

I Pledge a Grievance To the Flag...

William Hodgson, a fan of the English soccer team, has been ordered by the Houghton-Le-Spring, England, housing authority to take down his England flags because, officials said, it makes the street look messy, the Mirror reported. Hodgson, 50, was told his flags "bring down" the appearance of the street — which has been condemned by authorities, and many of the abandoned houses on it are scheduled to be torn down. "I can't believe it. It took us three weeks to decorate the house," Hodgson said, referring to his wife and three children. "We just wanted to show our support." (EXPRESS)

Bad News for 'Bang & Bury Kinky Crypts'

Brothels and cemeteries don't mix and should remain at least 660 feet apart, the mayor of Ipswich, Australia, said Tuesday. Paul Pisasale is part of a movement being led by the Urban

Local Government Association to prevent brothels — which are legal in Australia — from being built near cemeteries. "There's a lot of families and services that are going on and the last thing you want is someone conducting a spiritual service and a cemetery reflection time for family and a brothel going on next door," he said. ### Mark of the Fleeced

The date with apocalyptic ramifications, 06/06/06, on Tuesday didn't bring the rise of the two beasts to Earth as some biblical interpretations predicted (according to the Book of Revelation, "666" is the mark of the beast). It did, however, bring plenty of cheesy tourists — like, say, this woman who posed for a picture outside Screams Ice Cream shop — to Hell, Mich. Hundreds of people waited in line to buy mugs and T-shirts at the shop. (EXPRESS)

Some high school criminology students in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., got a taste of the real thing Monday. Their teacher had set up a mock crime scene at a park; the students were to bag evidence, take pictures and solve the "crime." They soon found a body and began working. But they didn't know it was real; once they realized it was, they notified their teacher and police. The man had died of natural causes. (AP)

Bush: Deal on Immigration Possible

President emphasizes border enforcement in debate over reforms

ARTESIA, N.M. | President Bush declared progress Tuesday in tightening the nation's southern border and pushing major immigration changes through Congress despite widespread skepticism that lawmakers can find a compromise.

The president brushed aside bitter divisions over the issue, saying the fact that there is active debate at all is cause for optimism.

“I know when you watch your television or listen to the radio, it seems like there's nothing but disagreement on immigration policy in Washington,” Bush said, a blazing sun beating down on him and the barn behind him used to simulate armed encounters in Border Patrol training exercises.

“Yet there's a growing consensus among all parties and all regions of the country that fundamental reforms are needed,” he said.

Bush spoke after watching trainees in the dusty heat role-play in ways to protect the U.S.-Mexico border against illegal crossings — boarding buses to check IDs, aiming pretend guns at a vehicle under suspicion, interviewing car occupants at checkpoints and scouring freight cars.

As the Border Patrol's only training ground, the 2,000-acre facility in this unforgiving corner of southeastern New Mexico has been increasingly busy. The number of agents nationwide has grown to nearly 12,000 from 9,000 at the beginning of Bush's presidency, and Bush is proposing to add another 6,000 agents by 2008.

The visuals of Bush's two border-state stops focused on enforcement — a key theme as the president woos recalcitrant conservatives in his party to abandon a get-tough-only approach and support comprehensive reform. JENNIFER LOVEN (AP)

Active Troops' Data Stolen From VA

WASHINGTON | Personal data on more than 2.2 million active-duty military personnel — not just 50,000 as initially believed — were among those stolen from a Veterans Affairs employee last month, the government said Tuesday.

VA Secretary Jim Nicholson said the agency was mistaken when it said that up to 50,000 Navy and National Guard personnel — and no other active-duty personnel — were affected by the May 3 burglary.

In fact, names, birth dates and Social Security numbers of as many as 1.1 million active-duty personnel from all the armed forces, along with 430,000 members of the National Guard, and 645,000 members of the Reserves, may have been included.

The disclosure is the latest in a series of revisions by the government as to who was affected since publicizing the burglary on May 22. At the time, the VA said the stolen data involved up to 26.5 million veterans discharged since 1975, as well as some of their spouses. (AP)

Blacks Worst Hit By Breast Cancer

CHICAGO | Younger black women who get breast cancer are far more likely than other afflicted women to have a particularly aggressive and lethal form of the disease, a study found.

The findings suggest that biology may help explain why breast cancer is deadlier in black women younger than 55 than it is in white women in the same age group. Other studies have blamed inadequate screening rates.

Since 1990, the average annual breast cancer death rate for younger black women in the United States has been 15.4 deaths per 100,000 population, versus 9.3 per 100,000 for younger white women.

A quick-spreading form of breast cancer called the basal-like subtype appeared in 39 percent of premenopausal black breast cancer patients. It accounted for 14 percent of breast cancer cases in older black women, and 16 percent of those in non-black women of any age.

CIA Failed to Pursue Nazis

Documents shed light on government's use of WWII criminals

WASHINGTON | Determined to win the Cold War, the CIA kept quiet about the whereabouts of Nazi war criminal Adolf Eichmann in the 1950s for fear he might expose undercover anticommunist efforts in West Germany, according to documents released Tuesday.

The 27,000 pages released by the National Archives are among the largest post-World War II CIA declassifications. They offer a window into the efforts to use former Nazi war criminals as spies, sometimes to detrimental effect.

The war criminals "peddled hearsay and gossip, whether to escape retribution for past crimes, or for mercenary gain, or for political agendas not necessarily compatible with American national interests," Robert Wolfe, a former archivist at the National Archives, said at a news briefing.

CAPTURED: Nazi war criminal Adolf Eichmann writes in Ramla prison in Israel in this 1961 file photo. Documents show the CIA knew where Eichmann hid for years.

In a March 19, 1958, memo to the CIA, West German intelligence officials wrote that they knew where Eichmann was hiding. Eichmann played a key role in transporting Jews to death camps during World War II. "He is reported to have lived in Argentina under the alias 'Clemens' since 1952," authorities wrote.

The documents were among the latest released under a 1999 law — resisted by the CIA — that called for disclosure of government records related to war crimes committed by the Nazi and Japanese governments.

Nigerian Linked to Bribery Investigation

Jefferson made a Md. dropoff to official's wife, records allege

GREENBELT, MD. | Nigeria's vice president sought up to $500,000 and a stake in a technology venture in his country, according to statements Rep. William Jefferson made to an FBI informant that were detailed in court documents filed in a bribery probe of the congressman.

Jefferson allegedly told the FBI informant that he had delivered "African art," which authorities believe was code for cash, to the wife of Nigerian Vice President Atiku Abubakar at midnight last July 31.

Details of the alleged deal were included in an affidavit filed in U.S. District Court to secure a warrant to search Abubakar's house in Potomac. The affidavit was unsealed Monday by the federal court in Greenbelt.

The affidavit says delivery of the money came shortly after Jefferson allegedly received $100,000 in cash from the FBI informant that was supposed to help smooth the way for a Kentucky telecommunications company, iGate Inc., to conduct business in Nigeria.

It is unclear if any of that money was delivered to the vice president's home, and his possible role is described only by Jefferson in FBI wiretaps.

The 39-page affidavit released Monday in Maryland, some sections of which remain sealed, does not mention Abubakar by name. But it does identify the Potomac home as the residence of Jennifer Douglas, Abubakar's wife. It also refers to "the Vice President of Nigeria" when detailing the alleged scheme.

Calif. Runoff Could Signal Fall Shift

Primaries may be a bellwether for mood in midterm elections

SAN DIEGO | Voters in Southern California went to the polls Tuesday to fill the House seat of imprisoned former Rep. Randy "Duke" Cunningham, and eight states held primaries for governor, House or Senate, offering an early read on the public mood ahead of this fall's midterm elections.

Money and attention from around the country poured into the San Diego-area election, with the Democrats seeing a rich opportunity to capture a solidly Republican district. Cunningham, a Republican, was sent to prison for eight years for taking bribes on a scale unparalleled in the history of Congress.

RUNOFF TO THE RACES: Brian Bilbray, GOP congressional candidate for California's 50th district, waits in line with his family before voting in San Diego on Tuesday.

Another Washington corruption case figured in Montana's primary, where GOP Sen. Conrad Burns sought the nomination for a fourth term. His popularity fell after ties to disgraced lobbyist Jack Abramoff became known, and two prominent Democrats jumped into the race.

In Alabama's gubernatorial race, GOP Gov. Bob Riley faced a primary challenge from former Alabama Chief Justice Roy Moore, who became a hero to the religious right when he was ousted over his refusal to remove a Ten Commandments monument from the state courthouse. Recent polls showed Riley far ahead.

Beheading Plot Alleged in Canada

Details of terrorism plans emerge during suspects' court hearing

BRAMPTON, ONTARIO | Spectators and family members of some of the 17 Muslim men accused of plotting terror attacks in Canada were stunned Tuesday when they heard allegations of plans to storm Parliament, take hostages and behead the prime minister.

Authorities during a hearing at the Ontario Court of Justice further alleged that one of the suspects, Steven Vikash Chand, also plotted to take over media outlets, including Canadian Broadcasting Corp.

The details of the charges — notably the purported plot to take political leaders hostage and behead them if Muslim prisoners were not freed in Afghanistan — added a chilling dimension to a case that has led U.S. authorities to toughen security along the border and unsettled Canada's large Muslim community.

Police say they expect more arrests, and intelligence officers are probing whether 12 adults and five juveniles arrested over the weekend had any ties to Islamic terror cells in the United States and five nations in Europe and Asia.

Chand, a 25-year-old restaurant worker from Toronto, was one of 15 suspects who made brief court appearances Tuesday. They were held behind a glass enclosure, brought in as groups of four or five, chained together in ankle shackles and handcuffs.

Chand, bearded with shoulder-length hair, blew a kiss to supporters as he was led away as formal bail hearings for him and the 14 others were postponed until at least Monday.

Speaking outside the courthouse, Chand's lawyer, Gary Batasar, said the charges were based on fear-mongering government officials.

"It appears to me that whether you're in Ottawa or Toronto or Crawford, Texas, or Washington, D.C., what is wanting to be instilled in the public is fear," he said.

Iraqi PM pledges to continue security plan in midst of violence

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Iraq's prime minister promised on Tuesday to release 2,500 prisoners and to press ahead with a security plan aimed at ending rampant sectarian and militia violence as he sought to quell public anger over a series of brazen attacks.

Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki's comments followed the daytime abductions of 50 people in downtown Baghdad by gunmen wearing police uniforms and the shooting deaths of 21 Shiites north of the capital.

Hours after he spoke, a parked car bomb exploded outside a Shiite funeral ceremony in southwest Baghdad, killing at least four people and wounding 20. Gunmen also killed one student, injured another and kidnapped three more at Baghdad University's business school.

The Iraqi Health Ministry also said Baghdad's main morgue had received 6,000 bodies during the first five months of this year. (AP)

Abbas Delays Referendum on Israel

RAMALLAH, WEST BANK | Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas stepped back from a political showdown with his Hamas rivals, giving the Islamic militants several days to recognize Israel or face the voters in a referendum on the idea.

Abbas, a moderate, has been pushing the Hamas-led government to accept a proposal that calls for a Palestinian state alongside Israel, implicitly recognizing the Jewish state. Abbas believes the plan will help lift the economic pressure on the Palestinians and allow him to pursue peace talks with Israel.

Hamas, which is sworn to Israel's destruction, has balked at the plan, demanding changes in the language, calling for more time to discuss it and saying it won't give in to deadlines.

"We are giving enough time, about three days, for our brothers in Hamas to reconsider their position," said Yasser Abed Rabbo, a top official of the Palestine Liberation Organization, which Abbas also heads.

Hamas officials welcomed Abbas' offer to extend their dialogue but repeated their opposition to deadlines on the referendum. (AP)

Doctors Remove Baby's Third Arm

2-month-old Chinese boy will need lengthy physical therapy

SHANGHAI, CHINA | A 2-month-old Chinese boy was recovering Tuesday after surgery to remove an unusually well-formed third arm.

Neither of the Liu Junjie's two left arms was fully functional, but surgeons decided to remove the one growing closer to his chest after tests showed it was less developed.

Dr. Chen Bochang, the chief surgeon, said the three-hour operation at Shanghai Children's Medical Center, went much better than expected.

"We found the nerves and blood vessels for the arm were formed just as they would be for a normal arm," Chen told reporters.

Chen said the baby will require long-term physical therapy to gain function in his remaining hand, which has no palm and flexes in either direction.

Liu's mother said she was relieved the surgery was over but worried for her son's future.

"I'm very happy but there are some fears that I just can't let go,"

Two-month-old Liu Junjie is recovering after his third arm was removed.

said the woman, who asked that her name not be used to maintain her privacy. "I worry about how he will grow, whether this will have a big impact on his growth."

Mount Merapi releases hot clouds of gas and debris as seen from Cangkringan near Yogyakarta, Indonesia, on Tuesday. Some 11,000 villagers were evacuated.

11,000 Evacuate In Fear of Volcano

Merapi's activity is on the rise following fatal quake in Indonesia

MOUNT MERAPI, INDONESIA | Officials evacuated 11,000 villagers from around Mount Merapi volcano as it shot out lava and superheated clouds of gas, authorities said Tuesday.

The mountain's lava dome has swelled in recent weeks, raising fears that it could suddenly collapse and send scalding clouds of fast-moving gas and debris into populated areas.

The government of nearby Magelang district mobilized more than 40 trucks and cars to evacuate about 11,000 villagers from three subdistricts near the foot of the mountain, said Edy Susanto, a district official.

Red-hot lava flowed as far as a half-mile from the mountain's crater, while gas clouds called pyroclastic flows streamed as far as 1½ miles down its southwestern slope, Subandriyo said.

Activity has risen since a 6.3-magnitude earthquake May 27 hit a region about 20 miles to the south, killing at least 5,862 people.

Some scientists say the quake may have contributed to the increased activity at the mountain. (AP)

Vatican Reaffirms Views on Sexuality

VATICAN CITY | The Vatican declared Tuesday that the traditional family has never been so threatened as in today's world, lashing out against contraception, abortion, in vitro fertilization and same-sex marriage.

The 57-page document was issued by the Pontifical Council for the Family, whose head, Cardinal Alfonso Lopez Trujillo, is a strong opponent of the use of condoms under any circumstances.

Gay activists in Italy quickly condemned the paper as an "attack against modern life, freedom and social redemption."

The Vatican's document did not break any new ground, but summarized traditional Roman Catholic Church positions in the first sweeping comment on the issues during Pope Benedict XVI's papacy.

"Man of modern times has radicalized the tendency to take the place of God and substitute him," it said. "Never before in history has human procreation, and therefore the family, which is its natural place, been so threatened as in today's culture." (AP)

Stocks Continue Inflation Tailspin

NEW YORK | Wall Street has bigger problems than Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke.

The big question on the Street these days is whether investors' miserable May will turn into a gloomy June and a sullen summer. After a 44-month bull run, some strategists say stocks are due for a serious correction while others argue the market is just pausing before it marches higher.

The two-day selloff that started after Bernanke's hawkish comments on inflation Monday has taken the Dow Jones industrial average to levels not seen since the beginning of March. The rout began after Bernanke told an international monetary conference that core inflation was rising at an annual rate of 3.2 percent by one inflation gauge and 3 percent by another.

"These are unwelcome developments," he said.

Wall Street read his comments as a hint that more interest rate hikes are on the way. After the Dow fell 199 points Monday, it lost another

In a note to clients Tuesday, Timothy L. Swanson, chief investment officer at National City, the nation's ninth-largest bank, wrote, "Repeat after me, 'I am a long-term investor.' ... It's just five simple words, yet after two days of stock market volatility, many investors are getting choked up before they can get the words out." ELLEN SIMON (AP)

'Jihad' Teacher Convicted

Third-grade Muslim school instructor part of Virginia 'network'

MCLEAN, VA. | A Maryland teacher was convicted Tuesday of lending aid to a Pakistani terrorist organization, the government's 11th conviction in its investigation of what it called a "Virginia jihad network" that used paintball games to train for global holy war.

Ali Asad Chandia, 29, a third-grade teacher at a Muslim school in College Park, Md., was convicted on three of the four counts he faced, including providing material support to a foreign terrorist organization and conspiracy to do the same.

He faces a maximum of 45 years in prison when sentenced Aug. 18.

The government alleged that Chandia traveled to Pakistan in the months after the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks and received military training from a group called Lashkar-e-Taiba, which is fighting for Muslim control over the disputed Kashmir region on the India-Pakistan border. The U.S. government designated Lashkar a foreign terrorist organization in December 2001.

Upon Chandia's return to the U.S. in January 2002, Chandia continued his assistance by serving as a chauffeur to a top Lashkar official. MATTHEW BARAKAT (AP)

Rapper Manager Gets Suspended Sentence

Man attacked a radio disc jockey after joke about phone earpiece

UPPER MARLBORO, MD. | The manager of a multi-platinum-selling rapper received a five-year suspended sentence Tuesday for attacking a radio disc jockey.

James Rosemond, 41, of New York also was fined $2,500 and ordered to serve three years unsupervised probation.

Rosemond is the manager of The Game, a recording artist from Los Angeles. He was convicted in January of assaulting WKYS-FM disc jockey Richard "DJ Zxulu" Dunkerson at the station's Lanham, Md., studio on Jan. 21, 2005.

Witnesses said Dunkerson was attacked by members of the artist's entourage after he reportedly joked Rosemond's phone earpiece "looked like something out of Star Trek."

Prosecutors had asked for a 10-year prison sentence, with all but six months suspended. Prince George's County State's Attorney Glenn F. Ivey declined to prosecute the rapper. (AP)

Too Bad Jag Plays By the Rules

The new XK could've found a better design to match regulations

ROAD TEST | The crossroads of government regulation and car design have seen some nasty pileups, but no company has suffered more than Jaguar. This includes the new, second-generation Jaguar XK, an absolutely stunning and stirring sports coupe/convertible design, an ensorceling work of animal appetite and biomechanical grace except, alas, for the first few inches — which look like hell. In order to comply with new European pedestrian-safety standards, Jaguar chief of styling Ian Callum was obliged to extend the nose of the car around the oval grille opening as well as lengthen the chin spoiler, so that the impact forces against a pedestrian's legs are better distributed.

The result is all too familiar in a town where women are constantly running to their plastic surgeons for injections of collagen: tragic trout lips. The new Jaguar is the Meg Ryan of luxury GTs.

MEL WELCON/L.A. TIMES

The new Jaguar XK has a handsome design — except for one conspicuous blunder in the car's nose. However, even with that, it's still prettier than the alternatives.

Here would be the place for an obligatory rant against the nanny state — or, in the case of the U.K., the Mary Poppins state — but the truth is, most car companies have little trouble coping with incrementally imposed safety regs. It is the peculiar curse of Jaguar, with its ethos of sleek, ellipsoidal design and preoccupation with heritage, that it should so often run afoul of such rules.

Still, don't let Callum off the hook entirely. There must have been a more elegant design solution than this, this gaping cakehole.

So what we have is, in fact, a nearly/not-quite perfect design, 99.44 percent pure; still, that's quite enough to trump the XK's most obvious rivals. The Jag is a powerful and masculine form, with tensed and back-loaded energy like an arm cocked to throw a punch. Some may say the sheet metal is pulled tight over the mechanicals. That's wrong. The XK doesn't have an anorexic, see-the-ribs look. This car has full, rounded volumes with only gentle creases along the rear haunches and along the beltline. It is, in other words, tumescent. If your XK lasts more than four hours, see your doctor.

This is only the second rendition of the XK since 1997. Although it is roughly the same length as the previous car, it is considerably wider over a wheelbase stretched more than a half-foot. These dimensions make the XK a more close-coupled car (with shorter front and rear overhangs) and set it deeper in its stance, brawny. The car has some prodigious wheel wells that, alas, will undoubtedly host big, ugly aftermarket wheels. Up to 20-inch alloy rims are factory options.

Callum and the structural engineers emphasized the convertible design first with the hardtop designed afterward. But the coupe is the more handsome design, and more livable — the wind noise on the convertible, top-up, gathered to a bothersome moan at "Vanishing Point" speeds.

On the other hand, because Jag went with a fabric top and not a bulky retractable hardtop, most of the 10 cubic feet of trunk space is preserved when the top is down (7.1 cubic feet). As for the coupe, you'll like the rear backlight. Pity the hatch isn't hinged on the side.

The XK is an all-aluminum monocoque structure assembled from cast joints, extrusions and riveted panels in Castle Bromwich, in Birmingham, England. DAN NEIL (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Car Care

Automotive expert PAT GOSS owns Pat Goss Car World, Inc., a local car repair company. He chats monthly on washingtonpost.com/cars.

I have a good-running car with 170,000 miles. I have to put in a quart of oil every 1,000 to 2,000 miles. Also, the gas mileage has slipped. Are these warning signs? Time to get rid of the car?

Sounds like it's in great shape. With a 170,000 miles, it has no value to speak of; why not drive it into the ground and then donate it?

When the temperature drops below freezing, my oil-pressure gauge indicates no pressure. Once the engine warms up for up to three minutes, the gauge says pressure is normal. What might be wrong?

Could be minor — a bad oil pressure switch. Could be major — no oil pressure. Oil pressure needs to be checked using a mechanical oil-pressure test gauge.

I have found a gas station that offers the 91 octane recommended for my car, but it is 5 to 10 cents more per gallon than the 93 octane sold at FreeState. I'm trying to figure out if it makes sense to pay more for the 91 or pay less for the 93 and know that eventually, I'll need to have extra maintenance done because of improper gas.

I would use the 93, because your car is a high-octane-fuel vehicle. The problem with carbon buildup comes from using high octane in an 87-octane engine.

What should I do to prepare for my emissions test? Should I take my chances and get work if it flunks?

Other than basic preventive maintenance — fresh oil change, PCV system service and things like that — don't try to second-guess emissions, you could spend a ton of money and still fail. Wait until it fails; the failure numbers are also diagnostic numbers.

Nats Select High School Phenoms

Club goes after young potential with first six picks in MLB draft

NATIONALS | What a difference a new owner makes, at least on draft day.

For the first time since the Montreal Expos were on the verge of contraction, the franchise now known as the Washington Nationals was able to approach the baseball draft like a team with a future.

Money was no object, and high-school prospects were the order of

PREP SCHOOL

The Nationals took high school players with their first six picks:

- No. 15 — Chris Marrero, OF
- No. 22 — Colton Willems, P
- No. 59 — Sean Black, P
- No. 70 — Stephen Englund, OF
- No. 91 — Stephen King, SS
- No. 121 — Glenn Gibson, P

the day Tuesday when general manager Jim Bowden started picking players.

"This was a very different experience for a lot of us in the room," Bowden said, "because we haven't been a big market team before, and philosophically this was the first time we were allowed to take the best player on the board, regardless, and we did that."

For four years, the franchise focused on college players who could be easily signed on a tight budget. This year, Bowden and his front office crew selected prep players with their first six picks.

The Nationals, owned by major league baseball's other 29 teams since 2002, are being sold to a group led by Ted Lerner and Stan Kasten.

The $450 million sale was approved by the owners on May 18, but the Lerner and Kasten can't take over day-to-day operations until the financial details of the sale are completed.

Still, Bowden was in touch with the new owners as draft day approached. They didn't tell him which players to take, but they gave him a philosophy to pursue, one consistent with Kasten's build-for-the-future history from his days the Atlanta Braves: "Take the best player on the board. Build long-term. Don't worry about short-term," Bowden said.

Giants Pick Burriss in 33rd Slot

Wilson High School alum is believed to be D.C.'s highest draft

MLB DRAFT | Wilson High School graduate Emmanuel Burriss hopes he can be a San Francisco treat for years to come.

The Giants selected Kent State's leadoff hitter and shortstop with the 33rd pick in Major League Baseball's First-Year Player Draft on Tuesday. Burriss is now believed to be the highest baseball draft pick to come out of the D.C. public schools system.

"It's exciting," he said moments after being drafted. "I didn't expect to be taken by them."

After a stellar summer in the Cape Cod League last year, the Mid-American Conference Player of the Year was scouted heavily by every major league team, including the Washington Nationals. San Francisco spoke less to him than other teams, Burriss said.

Burriss, who was fifth in the NCAAs with 42 stolen bases this season, was the second middle infielder chosen Tuesday — two spots behind shortstop Peyton Mattingly. MATT SWENSON (EXPRESS)

Orioles Add Infielder With Top Draft Choice

With 9th overall pick, Baltimore snags N.J. high schooler Rowell

ORIOLES | The Baltimore Orioles selected a high school infielder in the first round of the amateur draft Tuesday, selecting Bill Rowell of Bishop Eustace Prep in New Jersey with the ninth overall pick.

The Orioles hadn't taken a high school infielder in the first round since choosing Robert Bruce in 1978.

Baltimore began scouting Rowell in June 2005, and stayed on him.

"We had a lot of interest, and he has a lot of interest in the Orioles," said Joe Jordan, the Orioles scouting director.

Rowell, a left-handed hitter, batted .557 with a .660 on-base percentage, and was 22-for-23 in stolen base attempts. His home run total declined from 14 as a junior to six this year, as teams began to pitch around him and Rowell concentrated on hitting the ball to all fields.

As a junior, Rowell batted .529 with 62 RBIs. He played shortstop in high school, but the Orioles listed him as a third baseman when making their selection. (AP)

Americans Get the 'Fever'

Excitement builds as U.S. team readies for the start of World Cup

WORLD CUP | Kasey Keller walked to the edge of the field and signed autographs as people swarmed around.

American soccer players got to meet the German people Tuesday during the only scheduled U.S. public practice at the World Cup.

As fans applauded searing shots and sprawling saves, their energy filtered down to the U.S. team.

"The fever is definitely starting to hit," captain Claudio Reyna said.

A mix of Germans, U.S. tourists, American students and diplomats were in the crowd of about 1,000. The temperature was in the mid-60s, and the attendance was modest — 45,000 tickets were distributed for Brazil's training sessions — but fans appeared to have a good time.

Each team is required to hold at least one open practice. U.S. coach Bruce Arena, a secretive type, chose to hold his the morning after a closed-door scrimmage against Angola — when U.S. players wore shirts without numbers to make identification more difficult.

The American team anticipated its three first-round opponents would be sending scouts to try to glean intelligence about the U.S. lineup and tactics.

"We do less as far as what we'd work on because you don't know who's here," Reyna said. "It was a very — I don't know — generic practice." RONALD BLUM (AP)

WORLD CUP | BY MATT SWENSON

Soccer Finally On U.S.'s Brain

SOCCER ISN'T EXACTLY FOOTBALL in this country, but there's no denying the growth the sport has witnessed here over the past decade.

There's actually a low-level buzz of excitement building over the World Cup, which already has the rest of the world in a fever pitch.

Articles appear daily in newspapers across the country — and when they don't, readers complain. We think nothing of it now, but it would have been unheard of not so long ago.

It all stems back to FIFA awarding the U.S. the 1994 Cup. That led to the formation of Major League Soccer. Globally speaking, it's a minor league, but it has at least managed to keep the sport on America's back burner instead of in the fridge.

Of course, youth soccer leagues have been wildly popular here for a long time. It's just the best soccer players usually became football, baseball or basketball players by the time they reached high school.

But these days more and more are thinking with their feet, building up the country's talent base to the point where the U.S. is actually competitive. In fact, all that stands between the U.S. and a strong run in the World Cup the "group of death" the team will face in the first round.

The fact that it's common knowledge how tough a road the U.S. faces in the World Cup speaks volumes about the rising level of awareness about the sport. For comparison, name the two teams playing for the Stanley Cup. I dare you.

Edmonton and Carolina have nothing on the Czech Republic, Ghana and Italy. By next week, it won't even be a debate.

MLS Title's Up For Grabs

For the record, D.C.'s fast start won't matter when the playoffs start

UNITED | The 2005 MLS champion Los Angeles Galaxy finished last year's regular season at .500, winning just 13 of 32 games and, at one point, playing through a 10-game stretch with just one victory.

Those facts are about the only thing that might take any luster off D.C. United's 7-1-3 start to the 2006 season, which is the best in club history. It looks good in the back of the newspaper, but in a league where eight of 12 teams make the playoffs and home-field advantage is worth just one second-round game, United's gaudy record means very little.

"It doesn't get us anywhere now except for first place in June," D.C. Technical Director Dave Kasper said. "We want to be first at the end of the year and gaining home-field advantage in the playoffs."

That three-game sprint to the MLS Cup is four months away, and United has to take care in the meantime not to burn itself out on less critical games. Kasper conceded that United may have worn itself thin by the time it was thumped by Chicago in last season's playoffs.

"The coaching staff now knows when to put the gas on and when to take their foot off the pedal. We hope to use our depth as much as possible this year and just be fresh, and we'll do some different things during the course of the year to give our guys a little bit of a break," he said.

So United heads west Saturday to face the 2-8-1 Galaxy, a team that just fired coach Steve Sampson on Tuesday. It's a game that, based upon league history, features clubs with relatively equal chances of winning the league title. BRIAN STRAUS

This was a crash course in Stanley Cup 101, an off-day practice that took on the look of a tryout with the Oilers trying to decide which obscure goalie will take over the most important position on the ice.

Either Conklin or Markkanen will start for the Oilers in Game 2 of the

U.S.'s Last Hope Ousted at Open

Williams beaten by young surprise; Hingis fails to make semifinal

TENNIS | Once a teen sensation herself, Venus Williams lost Tuesday to a 17-year-old upstart at the French Open.

Nicole Vaidisova pulled off her second successive shocker at Roland Garros, beating Williams 6-7 (5), 6-1, 6-3 to earn her first Grand Slam semifinal berth.

Williams was the lone American, male or female, to reach the second week of the tournament. At 25, the five-time Grand Slam winner was the oldest women's quarterfinalist, and she again came up short in her 10th try for a Roland Garros title. "Obviously I'm disappointed," Williams said. "I would have loved to have done better."

Also eliminated was Martina Hingis; the French Open remains the only major event she has yet to win. Two-time runner-up Kim Clijsters won 7-6 (5), 6-1 over Hingis. Clijsters' opponent in the semifinals Thursday will be fellow Belgian Justine Henin-Hardenne, a two-time champion, who beat Anna-Lena Groenefeld 7-5, 6-2.

Top-ranked Roger Federer won his 26th Grand Slam match in a row, beating No. 12-seeded Mario Ancic 6-4, 6-3, 6-4. Federer reached the semifinals in his eighth consecutive major event.

"To make it to the semis was my first objective in Paris," said Federer, anticipating a possible showdown Sunday against defending champion Rafael Nadal. "There was enormous pressure at the start of the tournament, with everybody speaking about a final against Nadal, but first you have to win the matches before you get there."

Federer's opponent Friday will be No. 3-seeded David Nalbandian, who beat No. 6 Nikolay Davydenko 6-3, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4. STEVEN WINE (AP)

Research Study Trying to Improve Depressive Symptoms Quickly

Several medications are effective for treating depression; however, they take weeks or months to achieve their full effects. NIMH is studying whether a drug can cause a rapid antidepressant effect in patients with bipolar or unipolar depression. The study also tries to see if it can sustain the results with another medication in certain patients. Understanding how this works may help us understand depression and design better antidepressants. NIMH is seeking people ages 18-65 with depression (unipolar or bipolar) who are:

- Free of other serious medical conditions
- Willing to participate in a minimum of a 12-day inpatient stay

Research medications provided free of charge.
Compensation and transportation reimbursement is provided.

Ennui in 'Le Bureau'

'The Office' travels to France with all its workplace baggage

WORK OVERSEAS | What could workers in France, land of the 35-hour work week and seemingly endless vacations, possibly complain about?

Judging by the hilarious French adaptation of the classic British comedy "The Office," pretty much the same things as their English counterparts: a lunatic boss, exasperating co-workers and generalized boredom.

"Le Bureau," which premiered last week on Canal Plus, is the first time that the BBC comedy has been translated into a different language.

Gone are the quintessentially British allusions to endless pints of beer, replaced by talk of the occasional bottle of Champagne. In the original, the office prankster embeds his nemesis' stapler in orange Jell-O; in "Le Bureau," he hides a hunk of pungent fromage in his colleague's desk drawer.

"Le Bureau" also downplays the original's treatment of sexual harassment.

"In France, we don't think of it as harassment, but rather something quite nice," said Nicolas, who co-wrote the French adaptation. He and his partner, Bruno, only go by their first names.

Veteran actor Francois Berleand plays Gilles Triquet, the Gallic incarnation of David Brent, the British "boss from hell."

Though almost as deranged and

THE BOSS FROM L'ENFER: The only sticky office situation the French version of "The Office" does not tackle is sexual harassment, because in the land of l'amour, it is virtually not recognized. Racism, boredom and bad fashion, though, are fair game.

delusional as his English counterpart, Triquet is somehow more dashing than slimy Brent. Triquet's suits seem to fit better and his ties are less eye-popping.

Still, Triquet makes just as many faux pas.

A closet bigot, he can't resist stereotyping his black and Arab employees. In the first episode, he calls Laetitia, the young French receptionist of North African origin, "the warmth of the Orient, the spice route, the snake charmer."

The main plot of "The Office" — a debate over whether to downsize — required no tweaking. Office closures are a French fact of life, with high labor costs prompting firms to shift jobs abroad and unemployment rates averaging more than 9 percent.

Bruno and Nicolas replicated real office life as closely as possible. They shot from nine to five, with actors making the daily commute from Paris on public transport. The whole cast was required to punch in — and stay the whole day — regardless of whether they appeared in the scenes being shot.

"They mostly spent their time surfing the Internet," Nicolas said, adding that a few cast members are now unbeatable at online bridge.

Knights, ladies and killer rabbits have much to sing about in "Spamalot."

Monty Python's Spamalot: Bring Out Your Dead

What is the sound of two empty halves of a coconut being banged together? It may sound a lot like the musical "Monty Python's Spamalot," which comes to the National Theatre after a smash Broadway run. It's not exactly the movie ("Monty Python and the Holy Grail") but where else will you find killer rabbits, knights who say "Ni!", bizarrely persistent enemies and Castle Anthrax?

America's world-class steel industry generates 1.2 million jobs and contributes $350 billion to our economy.

Steel is the backbone of American manufacturing – and makes much of the equipment vital to our nation's military. Innovation and technology have transformed America's steel industry into one of the world's most competitive, sustainable and environmentally progressive. 'Tokyo Drift' takes chances on the road and in the theaters

POPCORN | Justin Lin knew exactly what he was getting into when he agreed to direct "The Fast and the Furious: Tokyo Drift."

He knew that he'd only have 18 weeks of prep work before the shoot; he also understood that the movie's June 16 release date was set in stone, meaning that he'd be editing the movie while filming it. And he was fully aware that the future of the series lay in his hands.

The studio is taking a risk with "Tokyo Drift"; this installment goes overseas and purposefully leaves the original stars, Paul Walker and Vin Diesel, back home.

"It was the ultimate challenge," the director said. "I knew that if I could survive this, I could survive anything."

Lin researched drifting on a trip to Japan, where he got a crash course in the history and culture of drifting, a form of racing most commonly practiced on twisty roads, where the person behind the wheel is essentially driving sideways.

"Drifting really grew out of working-class Japanese kids living in the backwoods," he said. "They had nothing to do except drive around these curvy roads and then they decided, 'Hey, let's try to pull the E-brake and steer and see what happens.'"

In Japan, drifting isn't just a sport — it's a virtual lifestyle, one that has inspired a number of competitions, advertisements and a manga series.

Lin knew that his film would be heavily scrutinized. He convinced two of drifting's biggest names, Toshi Hayama and Keiichi Tsuchiya (aka the "Drift King"), to sign on as consultants.

At the same time, Lin understood his primary responsibility: to deliver "the most entertaining summer popcorn car movie possible." ETHAN ALTER

Billy Preston, 59, Dies

Funky keyboardist worked with the Beatles and Stones

APPRECIATION | Billy Preston, the exuberant keyboardist who landed dream gigs with the Beatles and the Rolling Stones and enjoyed his own series of hit singles, including "Outta Space" and "Nothing From Nothing," died Tuesday at 59.

Preston's longtime manager, Joyce Moore, said Preston had been in a coma since November in a care facility.

Billy Preston appeared on the season finale of last year's "American Idol."

Preston, who had battled chronic kidney failure, had undergone a kidney transplant in 2002, but the kidney failed and he has been on dialysis treatments ever since.

Known for his big smile and towering afro, Preston was a teen prodigy on the piano and organ, and lent his gospel-tinged touch to classics such as the Beatles' "Get Back" and the Stones' "Can't You Hear Me Knocking?"

He broke out as a solo artist in the 1970s, winning a best instrumental Grammy in 1973 for "Outta Space," and scoring other hits with "Will It Go 'Round In Circles," "Nothing From Nothing" and "With You I'm Born Again," a duet with Syreeta Wright. (AP)

About a Writer

D.C. author is back with another book about growing up

LOCAL HEROES | Sarah Grace McCandless knew what she wanted to do with her life at age 4.

"I made little books and stories," said the Washington-based author. "I have the first one, this little book I wrote called 'The Circus Book' with these really awful, scary clowns I drew. I hate clowns, so I don't know what I was thinking."

There were moments, though, when McCandless considered a career in law. She eventually realized she was really saying, "I want to be on 'Law & Order.'"

"It wasn't the job, it was the story behind the job," said McCandless, who will be reading from her new book at Olsson's tonight.

In McCandless' "The Girl I Wanted to Be," the teenage lead, Presley, struggles with her identity and deals with the fact that her hip aunt and studly cousin are not the people she once thought.

How did the story in "The Girl I Wanted to Be" come about?

I started thinking about perceptions you have when you're younger and how those change with an incident. Something in your life where that switch goes off and you don't have the luxury of seeing things as a kid anymore. You start realizing very adult situations going on around you. I had these family idols I thought had perfect lives and couldn't make any mistakes. I came to realize that, of course, that wasn't the case.

Did having a book under your belt ease the writing process?

It was more difficult, but I enjoyed the experience in a different way because I wasn't as concerned with people thinking it was about me as much as "Grosse Pointe Girl." It's still fiction. I worried more about blurring the lines there.

Who are your writing influences?

Melissa Bank ("The Wonder Spot," "The Girls Guide to Hunting and Fishing") is a big influence. She's amazing. I love the way that she tells stories. I love her characters. They're beautifully flawed. I'd say the same about Pam Houston.

Did you ever get to meet them?

I had the opportunity to work with [Houston] at two different workshops, which was an amazing experience. I am such a book dork. I geek out over writers the way somebody may over a movie star. And so having the opportunity to work with my favorite "movie star" is mind-blowing to me.

He has also appeared on the "Cops" parody "Reno 911" and in big-screen comedies, including "Old School," "Bad Santa" and "Starsky & Hutch." KEVIN MCDONOUGH
(UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

A black and white photograph of a young man with dark hair, wearing a suit and tie, sitting at a piano. He is looking directly at the camera with a slight smile. His hands are resting on the piano keys. The background is slightly blurred, showing what appears to be a room with a door or window.

The WB never seemed comfortable with BLUE COLLAR TV and moved the show all over its schedule. Tonight's two episodes of tackle the topics of weddings (8 p.m.) and childbirth (8:30 p.m.). KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

California monks turned winemakers make zins and syrahs

In a Northern California monastery, 25 monks following the teachings of St. Benedict: Rise hours before dawn to pray, work the land and make a serious syrah — a full-bodied red wine.

The men at the Abbey of New Clairvaux have opened the first Roman Catholic Cistercian winery in North America, though their vineyard has a storied place in California's wine history.

The 580-acre (232-hectare) spread in this tiny town north of Chico was once owned by Leland Stanford — the railroad magnate, California governor and university founder — who ran what was considered the world's largest winery in the late 1800s.

The brothers' vineyards are more modest, but they hope wine sales will boost the monastery, where recruitment to the order has been hard and the monks must dig up ways to make cash.

"We need to work to keep going, but we don't want or expect to get rich. But the wine has done well," said Father Harold Meyer.

While their quarters are kept private, they've opened the monastery to the public for retreats, tours and weekend wine-tasting.

The grounds are quiet most of the day except for the abbot speeding by in a golf cart. At 7:35 p.m., the monks say their last prayer before the "grand silence," which lasts until prayers at 3:30 a.m. the next day.

Most of the fields and simple buildings are named, but not all carry religious monikers. Guest rooms for visitors taking retreats at the abbey are labeled by virtue: Kindness, Goodness, Gentleness, Peace.

The rooms are austere, with a twin bed and desk. Each room has a private, modern bathroom.

Guests are asked to observe silence at night but there are no religious requirements and no schedule to the stay. Guests are welcome to attend prayer services in the monastery's small church or worship as Wine expert Aimee Sunseri is helping an order of California monks to craft wines.

"The ground here is kind of sandy and rough, which is perfect for growing grapes," Sunseri said.

Perfect for grapes, maybe, but not necessarily for those toiling in the fields. They have named and blessed the two fields: St. James and Poor Souls.

The monks expect to make about 19,200 bottles of wine this year, twice as many as their first batch in 2002. That year, the monks harvested the first wine grapes at the Vina property since the close of the Stanford Winery in 1815. Stanford's vineyards were torn out in the early 1900s and then prohibition kicked in. The land was eventually parceled off and sold in pieces.

The monastery moved here from they wish in a quiet room.

Retreats are booked months in advance and the stays are donation-based.

"We get a lot of city people. We're intriguing, I guess," Meyer said, laughing.

The men follow the Roman Catholic teachings of St. Benedict, which advocate private and communal prayer and self-support through manual labor.

Trappists in Massachusetts sell jam and preserves, Benedictines in

New Mexico brewed up plans to make beer and Cistercians have made wine in France and Germany for centuries.

Before settling on wine, the Sacramento Valley monks dabbled with dairy, made a go at walnuts, then tried organic vegetables.

They now grow 10 varieties of grapes chosen specifically for the region's soil and climate, including petite syrah, tempranillo, graciano, zinfandel, barbera, viognier and muscat blanc.

Kentucky 51 years ago, building a church, a dining hall and residences. The monks are currently rebuilding part of an 800-year-old Spanish monastery.

The Abbey of New Clairvaux still uses Stanford's 100-year-old brick wine cellar to produce, age and bottle wines.

"People will come at first because we're monks, but we want them to come back because this is a good place and we have quality goods to offer," Meyer said. OLIVIA MUNOZ (AP)

A new company adds television screens to gas station pumps

TV seems to be everywhere these days. At the supermarket, the mall, and now, thanks to a Michigan-based startup company, the gas pump.

Gas Station TV, based in the Detroit suburb of Oak Park, has been testing its service for several months in Dallas with TV monitors installed above gas pumps that show short clips of news, weather and traffic, and, of course, advertising.

This fall, the company plans to expand the program to a total of 100 gas stations in Dallas, Houston and Atlanta, all owned by Murphy Oil USA, which operates filling stations at Wal-Mart stores.

Walt Disney Co.'s ABC will sell ads for the screens and also provide local news, weather and other programming for the screens, mainly from ABC's locally owned or affiliated television stations.

David Leider, a former marketing executive at Yahoo Inc. who is the company's chief executive, says they are focused on making the programming useful to users and tailored to the average length of time it takes to fill up with gas — about four minutes.

“We will not over-advertise,” Leider said in an interview. He said the company received overwhelmingly positive feedback from users and gas station owners in the handful of locations in Dallas where it was being tested.

The video will include news segments from local TV anchors, traffic updates as well as some consumer-oriented segments from ABC's “Good Morning America” program. Since gas pumpers won't be able to switch off the video, keeping it relevant and engaging is key, Leider said.

“Pumping gas is boring and mundane,” Leider said. “We live in a very can't-sit-still, multi-stimulus environment. We are convinced that people will be very favorable to this experience at the gas station.”

The company's main backer is DHW Capital, a Los Angeles-based private equity firm, but company executives declined to release financial details such as how much had been invested in the company. Representatives from Murphy Oil declined to be interviewed.

Leider said he expected the company to become profitable next year, after it rolls out its service to the 400 locations it hopes to reach by the beginning of 2007. The programming will be distributed to the screens electronically through secure feeds over the Internet.

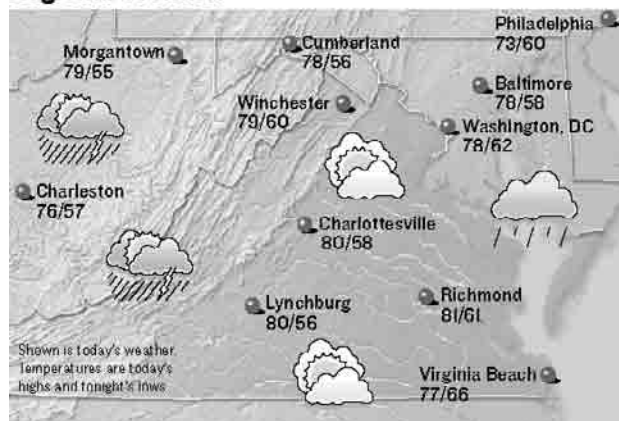

Several advertisers bought spots on the service during the test run in Dallas, including PepsiCo Inc., The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., and Allstate Corp. Leider said the company was in active discussions with advertisers but had not yet signed any firm commitments for the wider launch in the fall.

In March, CBS Corp. signed up to become a programming partner with SignStorey Inc., a Fairfield, Conn.-based company that has video screens installed in 1,300 supermarkets. SETH SUTEL (AP)

Menswear designer of the year Thom Browne, left, stands with Harry Connick Jr., who presented the award to him Monday.

Designers of Distinction

'Fashion Oscars' handed out

Francisco Costa, Thom Browne and Tom Binns are the top fashion designers of the year, taking home the big prizes at Monday night's Council of Fashion Designers of America awards.

Costa was named womenswear designer of the year three years after taking over creative duties at Calvin Klein from the company's namesake designer. Klein won the award in 1993 and 1987.

"If there's an American dream, this is it for me," said Costa, who grew up in Brazil's countryside.

He beat out perennial nominee Marc Jacobs, who did win the womenswear award in 1997, and Lazaro Hernandez and Jack McCollough of Proenza Schouler, who had been picked as the best up-and-coming designers only three years ago.

Meanwhile, Browne was selected over Cloak's Alexandre Plokhov and Ralph Lauren for menswear designer. Browne told the crowd, which included Janet Jackson,

Jessica Simpson, Sandra Oh and Sean "Diddy" Combs and Chloe

Sevigny in addition to top fashion designers Vera Wang, Diane von Furstenberg and Donna Karan, that Lauren was an inspiration to him — and to so many others in the room.

Harry Connick Jr. gave Browne his trophy, putting on Vogue editor-in-chief Anna Wintour's signature sunglasses and holding her tiny handbag to prove his fashion credentials. He is also married to model Jill Goodacre.

The CFDA awards are the fashion industry equivalent of the Oscars. Jeremy Piven, star of HBO's "Entourage," was the host of the 24th annual ceremony.

The fusion of fashion and Hollywood continued with Lindsay Lohan and Karl Lagerfeld presenting Binns with the award for accessory design. The jewelry designer was selected over Jacobs and Michael Kors by the CFDA membership, press, retailers and stylists who vote on the awards.

The rest of the awards went to a mix of industry icons, including photographer Bruce Weber, former Neiman Marcus senior vice president and fashion director Joan Kaner and CFDA president Stan Herman — who was serenaded by a sultry Bernadette Peters, and the next generation of fashion stars. Doo-ri Chung won the award for emerging talent in womenswear, Devi Kroell for accessories and Jeff Halmos, Josia Lamberto-Egan, Sam Shipley and John Whitley of Trovata for menswear.

Kerry Washington arrived with Kors. Both she and the "Project Runway" judge had the same dress in mind for her to wear, a coral-colored short cocktail dress. "I'm lucky. I get a great dress and a great date," Washington said. SAMANTHA CRITCHELL (AP)

Designer Dialing

Motorola and Dolce and Gabbana have teamed up to create the MOTORAZR V3i, which takes the ubiquitous RAZR and makes it a lot shinier and more expensive. The phone, which the press release claims is available at D&G boutiques, is so exclusive that we couldn't get anyone to tell us how much it cost. We can tell you that it has a pre-loaded music player, a 1.23 megapixel camera, and a line of accessories that includes a personalized Bluetooth headset and a gold eelskin carrying case. Each phone also comes with a pendant featuring the initials "DG," just so everyone around you will know that this isn't just any shiny, gold phone. KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

Frozen Goes Fancy

You probably got an ice cream maker as a wedding present, right? Or an ill-advised birthday gift? And you made a halfhearted batch of vanilla, and now the machine is sitting in the closet, bored and unloved. A PASSION FOR ICE CREAM ($35, Chronicle) looks to reignite your creamy love. The range of the 95 recipes goes from the simple (lime ice cream) to the laughably complex (mini meringue baskets filled with pomegranate sorbet.) While some of the desserts are only for the aspiring pastry chef, the ice cream flavors in the insane recipes sound pretty good, so you could probably just make those and still please everyone around. After all, is there really a need to dress up good ice cream? K.P.K.

The Gay-Marriage Divide

POLL CENTER | Same-sex marriage is certainly a hot-button issue — visitors at READEXPRESS.COM tallied more than 450 votes on Tuesday's question: Should the U.S. ban same-sex marriage?

As of 5:30 p.m. when 447 votes were registered, a majority (60 percent) said no, while 40 percent said yes. The poll is not scientific, but it is interesting to look at the breakdown by station and by Metro line.

The ORANGE LINE led the system in its opposition to a potential same-sex marriage ban, while the RED LINE registered the tightest split: 44 percent supporting a ban to 56 percent against. The 34 votes from DUPONT CIRCLE were surprisingly close: 53 percent opposing and 47 percent favoring a ban. What do you think about the topic, or the poll and its results? Let us know at COMMENT S@READEXPRESS.COM. MICHAEL GRASS (EXPRESS)

Very little of the interior survived the renovations, but the Art Deco exterior remains for the most part unchanged. M.G.

Washington Post personal finance columnist MICHELLE SINGLETARY was online at washingtonpost.com/liveonline on Tuesday to discuss wedding planning.

Who is suppose to pay for what? Is the total cost of the wedding the responsibility of the bride's parents regardless of age?

Well, my dear, times have changed. Only about a quarter of parents (the bride's parents, that is) actually pay for the wedding anymore. Most often these days it is the couple getting married who pay for the wedding. And that's because many of the parents don't have the money.

On a scale of 1 to 10 with 10 being stupid (your word, not mine) I would say cashing out your 401k to pay for a wedding would be a 20. First, you won't net $15,000. You will net about half of that with penalties and taxes. Second, do you really want to start off your life rob-

Don't Waste Money Filling Up the Tank: Take Metro and Dump the Pump!

Join thousands of area residents in National Dump the Pump Day tomorrow, June 8, and find out how much time and money you can save by taking Metrobus and Metrorail.

According to a recent news poll, rising gas prices are causing financial hardship for more than half of all Americans and could have a significant impact on the economy. Consumers are paying more at the pump and cutting back on spending, leisure activities and travel plans. But wouldn't you rather save your money and be able to do the things you enjoy?

If you're sick of skimping and paying more to sit in traffic, then park your car and take Metro instead. By using public transportation on a regular basis, a person can save between $300 and $3,000 in fuel costs per year. Mass transit not only fights high gas prices, but it also helps reduce traffic congestion and improve the quality of air we breathe.

Take a stand against rising gas prices. Dump the pump and "go green" on Metro!
